Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 22 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet and windy in the northwest. Mostly fine elsewhere.

Today:
Rain and strong winds in the northwest gradually moving southwards whilst weakening. Becoming clearer in the far north with a few showers. England and Wales mostly dry with good sunny spells. Rather warm in the east and south in sunshine.

Tonight:
Weakening area of rain moving south across north England and Wales. Dry with clear spells to the south. Further rain and strong winds arriving in the north.

Thursday:
Some rain in western areas, particularly northwest Scotland, south Wales and southwest England. Mostly dry eastern areas with sunny spells. Rather warm in the southeast.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Patchy rain at times for northern and western areas Friday. Elsewhere, staying mainly fine and warm throughout, though some rain or showers in places Saturday and Sunday, locally heavy/thundery.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.